Charles Burns' Black Hole is not just one of the best graphic novels I've read in the past few years, it's one of the best novels period. Taking place in suburban Seattle in the 70's, and featuring rotating POV's of various high-school students, Burns' top-notch writing, characterization, and artwork perfectly capture what it's like to be a teenager, complete with all the fears, insecurities, triumphs, and tragedies that seem so important at the time.
