Grind Coffeehouse Mystery 8

Holiday Grind is the 8th book in the Coffeehouse Mystery Series featuring

Clare Cosi and her coffeeshop in Greenwich Village, The Village Blend. I purchased this book because I had wanted a Holiday themed book for my train ride home and this book fit the bill, my head was buried in this book for my entire ride.

#8 Holiday Grind | The Coffeehouse Mysteries

Holiday Grind by Cleo Coyle, the eighth book in the popular Coffeehouse Mystery series, provides coffee-loving readers with a special holiday blend of murder and coffee, flavored with romance and set against the backdrop of Christmas in New York. The book opens early in the Christmas season with a latte tasting party at the Village Blend coffeehouse.

This is the eighth Coffeehouse Mystery and is the first holiday focused book of the series. It seems all cozy mystery series end up doing a Christmas-type book at some point and this series is no exception. Using the somewhat standard Santa gets whacked storyline, I still found this enjoyable even though I read it at the wrong time of year (March).

Holiday Grind: Coffeehouse Mystery Series, Book 8

September 28, 2009 In the charming eighth coffeehouse mystery from the pseudonymous Coyle (the husband-wife writing team of Marc Cerasini and Alice Alfonsi), Clare Cosi, owner of the Village Blend, is preoccupied with creating flavorful and memorable drinks for the upcoming holiday season. Then one snowy December day, Clare discovers a beloved customer, Alf Glockner, shot to death in a nearby alley.

Clare's grown very fond of Alfred Glockner, the part-time comic and genuinely jolly charity Santa who's been using her coffeehouse as a place to warm his mittens. When she finds him gunned down in a nearby alley, a few subtle clues convince her that Alfred's death was something more than the tragic result of a random mugging, despite the conclusions of the police.
